

Suppliers' minimum requirements

Quiet Company values the importance of strong open relationships with our partners and suppliers. We encourage a diverse supply chain and actively choose to work with companies that align to our ethics and values.

Your suitability to become a supplier to Quiet Company will typically be managed through an open and fair selection process, sometimes as part of competitive process. Regardless of procurement approach, there is a set of minimum requirements that we expect all of our suppliers to meet where evidence may be requested. If you are a smaller company, we will always take a reasonable approach so that you are not disadvantaged, and we can maintain our commitment to engaging with all sizes of companies in a fair and transparent manner.

Modern Slavery Act 2015

Quiet Company has a commitment to abolishing Modern Slavery in our supply chain and welcomes the commitment of our supplier to do the same.

If you are over the legal threshold of £36m, we would also require your company to comply with the provisions of the Modern Slavery Act 2015.

Settlement Goods

Quakers have a long history of working for peace, including in Israel and Palestine. In light of this experience, we will not knowingly purchase products or services from the Israeli settlements in the West Bank or from organisations that profit from the occupation of Palestine. The settlements are illegal under international law. Quakers consider that this policy is a nonviolent move for peace for Israelis and Palestinians.

Values / Cultural fit

We expect our suppliers to adhere to the Ethical Trading Initiatives base code.

<https://www.ethicaltrade.org/>

- Freedom of Labour – that no forced, bonded or involuntary prison labour is used in the supply chain of your product or service
- You provide safe and hygienic working conditions for your people
- That Child labour shall not be used
- You are a Living wage employer
- Working Time Directive
- Provision of regular employment on the basis of a recognised employment relationship
- No harsh or inhumane treatment is allowed

The following five principles, which are the product of Quaker spiritual leadings, inform how Quiet Company operates:

- Truth and integrity;
- Justice, equality and community;
- Simplicity;
- Peace; and
- Environmental sustainability.
